Gen. Hanson Tells Why You Don't Always See State Cop On the Job

Brigadier General James W. Hanson, chief of the State Police, is not disturbed when someone tells him of riding a number of miles on Maine highways and not seeing a member of the department. The wonder to him is that they see as many as they do. His reason for this attitude of mind is: There are 43 men available for patrol duty in the department and there are 25,000 miles of highway in the State to be covered. It is necessary to spread the men "very thin" to do this work.

This was one of the things which Gen. Hanson endeavored to impress upon members of the Lewiston Rotary Club.

Gen. Hanson said that the first State police or anything along that line was organized in Canada in 1879 and was known as the Royal North-west Mounted Police. The second was the Philippine constabulary formed by the United States in 1898.

Following that there was a lapse until 1906, when Pennsylvania organized such a body and now a number of the States had them. The State police in Maine, as it was now known, came into existence in 1925. Before that time there had been a highway patrol. It had no police authority, and dealt only with automobile traffic problems. Originally the selection of members took the same routine as the naming of a justice of the Supreme Court; that is, appointment by the Governor and confirmation by the Executive Council. Since that time the law had been changed so that men were enlisted for a period of three years. The first six months they were on probation, after which the appointment became fixed and they could be removed only after trial by a board. The regulations governing this were

HAVE YOU VISITED THE DESERT OF MAINE?

Many Knox County readers of The Courier-Gazette have paid their first visit to the Maine desert in Freeport the past summer, and the strange phenomenon has attracted thousands of tourists from all over the United States. The desert is less than three miles off the main highway to Portland, and it is not easy to understand why anybody should pass that way without devoting a half hour's visit to one of the most remarkable places to be found in all New England. The rapidly spreading sands now overspread 350 acres of what was cultivated lands many years ago, and tree-tops protruding through them give an idea of the depth. The sand is a different type than that found elsewhere in Maine, being rather yellowish, and while it is as soft as meal, the drifts over which you walk are very firm. Scientists are puzzled to account for the desert. Meantime the owner, H. M. Goldrup, is making a nice little living out of the sands, by collecting ten cents a head from all who visit the desert. It is the best ten-cent eyeful you ever saw.

Grocery and Food Code Authority Aims To Create Better Understanding With Public

An intimate "across-the-counter" discussion of the nation's food bill, its ups and downs, the whys and wherefores, including the effect of NRA was made over radio station WBZ, Boston, as a part of an NBC nation-wide hookup by C. H. Janssen, Chairman, National Food and Grocery Distributors' Code Authority, Friday afternoon, speaking under the auspices of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Mr. Janssen's address as a guest of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is a part of a general effort by the grocery trade to win the sympathetic understanding and approval of its aims and objectives in operation of the food code," H. R. Winchenbaugh, secretary of the Knox County Food and Grocery Distributors' code, asserted in announcing the broadcast.

"We know that the food code has eliminated many harmful practices in the distribution of food, and the resulting benefits have been shared alike by the trade, by labor, by the consumer, and by the producer. It is time that the interested public be given a fuller understanding of this most important of all codes."

"Mr. Janssen is one of the most distinguished food distribution economists of the nation. For many years he was executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers. He is earnestly interested to promote an era of goodwill and intelligent understanding between the trade and the public."

WHY VINALHAVEN REJOICES

Advent Of Bay State Fisheries Co., Means Operations On Large Scale There

The advent of such a reputable organization as the Bay State Fisheries Co., at Vinalhaven, and the beginning of operations on a large scale, has created a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and interest on that island, the residents of which view the coming winter with a much greater degree of optimism.

The following information, accidentally omitted from our Vinalhaven correspondence in Thursday's issue, tells briefly the status of affairs there. Whistles from the fish wharf, electric light and power house, and tooting of horns from vessels in the harbor, greeted the beam trawler "Ebb,"

Capt. Shea, of the Bay State Fishing Co., Tuesday afternoon on arrival with 150,000 lbs. of fish. Acting pilot from Matineux Rock Light was Capt. John Wentworth. There are 60 men employed by the company and they started discharging Wednesday morning. Fishing is one of this town's largest industries and the opening of the fish plant means a whole lot to Vinalhaven. It was through the efforts of L. B. Dyer, J. P., who made the trip to Boston to negotiate with them that the coming of the Bay State Fishing Co. to Vinalhaven was made possible.

WEST ROCKPORT'S TRAGEDY

A shocking tragedy befell the family of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Merrifield of West Rockport Thursday in the death of two of their children which occurred that morning from poisoning. The victims were Charles Stewart Merrifield, aged 3; and Herbert Livingston Merrifield, aged 4. The Merrifields occupy the upper flat in a two-family house, and while Mrs. Merrifield was calling at the flat below the children, who were left upstairs found and ate some poison tablets. The mother on returning found the children in convulsions and immediately summoned Dr. J. G. Hutchins of Camden, but all efforts to save them failed and they died within an hour.

BECAUSE OF CODE

The Working Hours At Mt. Waldo Granite Plant Have Been Curtailed

The Mount Waldo Granite Company at Frankfort has been obliged to curtail its working schedule, both in hours and days, in order to comply with the NRA Code requirements.

governing the granite industry. The change went into effect the first of the month.

The corporation is furnishing the granite for the new welfare building in New York city and has been working 24 hours a day, six days in a week. The new schedule calls for 16 hours a day's work and only a five day week a reduction of about 50 percent. Some 300 men have been employed. The new schedule will probably necessitate laying off some of them.

To conform to the other buildings of the group, the new building is of pink granite, which has been quarried at Deer Isle and brought to Frankfort for cutting.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had my life to live again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness.—Charles Darwin.

SEA FEVER
I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by;
And the wheel's kick and the wind's song,
And the white sail's shaking,
And a gray mist on the sea's face,
And a gray dawn breaking.

I must go down to the seas again, for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied,
And all I ask is a windy day with the white clouds flying,
And the flung spray and the blown spume,
And the sea-gulls crying.
I must go down to the seas again, to the vagrant gipsy life,
To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;
And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover,
And a quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over.
John Masefield.

THREE-TIMES-A-WEEK

Let no evil speech proceed from your mouth; but that which is good to the edification of faith, that it may afford grace to the hearers.—Ephesians 4:29.

A HAND TO THE RED CROSS

Rotarians at their yesterday luncheon were brought into association with Red Cross through an address by Miss Laura Knowlton, the Maine regional director of that great organization, who was in the city in connection with a round of visitation that precedes the annual nationwide membership drive which occurs next month, and in which our own city will participate, as it hitherto always loyally has done. What Red Cross is, how its helpful beginnings arose out of the sufferings of the battlefield and gradually extended to cover the whole country, was admirably told by the young speaker, who laid particular emphasis upon its care of soldiers and its fundamental principle that is addressed to helping the sick and needy of a community to help themselves.

Many things are said by the ignorant and the malicious derogatory of Red Cross. It is always that way. But those who have the sense to understand what it means to the world as its protector in occasions of sickness and disaster, realize something of the greatness of the organization and how worthy of the support the people generously give to it.

Miss Knowlton's intelligent and convincing review of the outstanding features of Red Cross was supported by a brief but equally convincing story of the work carried on in our city, told by Miss Steele, the local nurse, a story which, supplementing that of the other speaker, brought from the Rotarians a warm expression of appreciation and leaving with each hearer a sense of satisfaction that his club, along with the other service clubs of the city, is pledged to lend its support to next month's campaign.

ROADSIDE BEAUTIFYING

We note with pleasure the increasing publicity being given to the campaign for roadside beautifying that the Maine Federation of Garden Clubs has set itself to support, and to which Governor Brann and the State Highway Commission have also endorsed. Some of the details of the movement have already been laid before the readers of these columns, from whom many responses of approval have been heard. With public approbation enthusiastically finding itself manifested we may confidently look to see in this connection great things another year brought to pass.

THE OLD-TIME AUCTIONEER

A news paragraph hinting at an auction sale soon to take place in Main street, has set agog the denizens of that business region and loaded the air with surmise. There is something associated with the term that unfailingly excites interest, whatever proportions the occasion may take on. In an earlier time the auction was made a familiar accessory of our city's business life, out of which may be summoned a number of figures of the past who carried the license that the law demanded of this public functionary. Perhaps the reader will recall one of the best-known of this profession, Charles F. Tupper, one time a clergyman of the Methodist persuasion, who passing thence into the arena of shop-keeping, allied with this activity the art of the auctioneer. In this congenial sphere he developed a recognized dexterity, with ease of manner and a convincing oratory, perhaps brought out of his pulpit experience, that went to the hearts of his audience and returned upon him in satisfactory bids. We can see him now, with the raised gesture of the arm and the earnest modulation of voice, declaring the matter in hand as going, going and irrevocably gone. Gone also is Mr. Tupper, and the numerous others of his ilk, who imparted color to that period long vanished.

The Baptist Men's League is to have a little membership drive of its own this season. The first meeting will be held Thursday night and will have a good feed, a good laugh and a good time for everybody. The officers of the League are: President, Herman M. Hart; vice presidents, Vesper L. Packard and Harold W. Look; secretary, A. E. Brunberg; treasurer, Almon Bird. President Hart announces the appointment of these standing committees: Entertainment: Frank H. Ingraham, Frank A. Winslow, Elmer B. Crockett; executive, Edwin H. Crie, J. Charles MacDonald, Milton M. Griffin; membership, E. L. Brown, Harry P. Chase, David S. Beach, J. N. Southard, Osmond A. Palmer, Charles A. Emery; finance, Fred A. Carter, J. Lawton Bray; sick and welfare, Walter A. Greenlaw, Charles A. Collins.

We had our first snow squall of the season yesterday, but got out of it much easier than they did up in Aroostook County where six inches of snow fell and telephone service was thrown out of gear.

"FORGOTTEN ISLAND"

A Story of Matinicus, Written By a Pastor Who Summered There

Rev. Ralph H. White left Matinicus Friday for his home in New Haven, completing a very pleasant summer pastorate of the Matinicus church. Mr. White came in the middle of June accompanied by Mrs. White, and they were afterward joined by Miss Laura M. White who had just returned from China where she had been engaged in missionary work for 40 years.

Miss White found the cool air of Matinicus exactly what she needed to help her recover from the climatic disabilities incident to a long residence in the tropics.

Maize Summer Isle

This is a forgotten island 20 miles off the Maine Coast, a very little one, just two miles long and the ships keep far away from its dangerous reefs. Its romantic history antedates Plymouth Colony, but it is known only to a very few. Three-fourths of its one hundred and fifty inhabitants bear the names of the three families who settled here two centuries ago.

Quaint customs linger here. The old square dances are the ones the people know and they throng the meeting house. It is a paradise of wild flowers and because of its cool summers a few arctic species linger on.

The day is opened and closed by a chorus of song birds. Several rare varieties have found sanctuary here. Just off shore are rocky islets where sea birds have nested undisturbed for ages. During the long summer twilight the vicious little terns squabble with the screaming gulls for their full share of rights and privileges. As this clamor pulsates with the slow rhythm of the surf, the music is beautiful or atrocious, as you please, and resembles a modern symphony. Just lately the cormorants have come. They are big and black and they line the rocky shores gazing down upon the passing craft with motionless and funereal silence. There is one species of auk, not found elsewhere on the continent south of Labrador. The natives call them sea parrots.

The waters teem with marine life. Cod, haddock, cusk, mackerel, pollock, herring and other kinds of fish are caught right off shore but are seldom worth more than fifty cents a bushel. One frequently sees the fin of a giant tuna, a shark or sword fish cutting the water. They furnish mighty good fishing to the more venturesome sportsman. The porpoises come within easy distance of a boat and if a man is a quick shot he can secure some good meat. Properly dressed it can hardly be told from good beef steak. There has scarcely been a day all summer when seals could not be sighted, and when they break and blow, as they frequently do, within a hundred feet of your boat, the experience has plenty of kick in it.

During the summer one can get his lobsters for 12 or 15 cents a pound. All the men go lobstering. Some own a three thousand dollar outfit of a motor boat, fish house and 150 traps. Others have only a humble "pea pod" and set their fifty traps just behind where the waves crash against the reefs. Bolder or more skillful boatmen do not exist. To go with one of these men while the sunrise glow rests upon the sea, as the mists melt, the horizon broadens and the distant islands break into view is a vision of loveliness that will often flash again "upon the inward eye." Each trap brings to the surface curious sea creatures that have crawled into it. The lobsterman calls it trash but it is treasure trove to the landman.

It is an eerie sight when the herding are torches ashore in a cove and laded with dip nets out of the phosphorescent sea. The most hilarious sport is to go squidding where everybody's face and hands, oilskins and the entire boat are dripping with the inky black liquid which these living fountain pens can squirt to copiously.

Here one is far from the "madding crowd." The NRA and the great drought have no significance. The people dwell in contented individualism. There are none of the hatreds and jealousies born of competition where the sea offers a living to all alike. If a man is ill no one seizes his traps or his location but the neighbors cheerfully haul his traps for him. Every man knows that if he is caught out in a blow or a blinding snow storm his neighbors will work with every ounce of strength and take the last deadly risk to find him. It is the intensity of their human relations and these mutual ties of

WOULD "RUSH THE GROWLER"

Gov. Brann Wants Immediate Session Of Legislature For Six Percent Beer

Gov. Brann has placed himself on record in favor of an immediate session of the Legislature to enact emergency liquor legislation, and took steps to learn whether the legislative membership will concur in his belief.

Convinced that Maine will lose very substantial revenue if he waits for the legislative session next winter, he called for three public meetings to be held next week to learn whether the Legislature will agree to enact emergency liquor legislation.

Gov. Brann plans to go before the meetings and express his feeling that Maine should take steps immediately to carry out the expressed wish of the voters on the repeal issue last month, and to enable the State to profit financially thereby. He indicated in his formal statement Thursday that he will ask for legislation "as liberal as" the New Hampshire which embraces a State store system, with sale of hard liquors only in State operated stores and by the glass in hotels, with beer up to 6 percent alcoholic content allowed in restaurants.

The Governor's Statement

"The citizens of Maine by their vote on the repeal issue in the September election indicated clearly and conclusively," said the Governor in his formal statement, "that they are in favor of making drastic changes in the State's prohibitory laws. The question now presents itself as to whether the present Legislature should be called into special session immediately to carry out the expressed will of the people, or whether we should await the regular legislative session next January."

"I am convinced that to wait several months for a new Legislature to convene and act upon this important matter will cost the State of Maine a very substantial revenue which it sorely needed. I believe that the fellowship that bind these people to their island home and who shall say that they are not worth more than a fortune on the mainland?"

The writer does not care to publish abroad the name of this idyllic spot. It would be a pity to see its beaches strewn with sprawling flappers and "boiled egg"ers picnicking in its coves. If one is tactful and appreciative these refined and sensitive islanders will receive him more hospitably than perhaps he has ever experienced but at the least sign of patronizing or of "putting on airs" the visitor will feel the atmosphere grow icy cold. It is not the temperature which does not rise above eighty even, not the birds and flowers and pointed pines, nor the magic of the sea that furnishes the island's greatest charm but the realization that the people here have not forgotten the lost art of acting like human beings.

GLENWOOD Guaranteed Furnaces

Some IMPORTANT Information

The principal advantages of a pipe furnace are the almost instant heat it gives when a fire is started, the ventilation provided from constant air circulation, and the register adjustments which make it possible to control the temperature in each room individually.

When air is heated it expands and becomes lighter than the cold air surrounding it. This principle is well illustrated by the warm air balloons sent up on the Fourth of July. In these the warm air is imprisoned in the paper balloon, and in rising carries the balloon with it.

A Constant Circulation of Heated Air

A pipe furnace consists of an efficient heater surrounded by a closed casing of sheet steel. From the top of the casing, pipes are taken to registers in the different rooms of the house. Return, or cold air pipes are connected with registers in the floor of one or two downstairs rooms and lead to the bottom of the furnace casing.

When a fire is built in the furnace, air in the casing is heated and rises through the warm air pipes to the rooms, being replaced by the cold air which enters the casing through the cold air return pipes. This circulation provides for healthful ventilation in every room.

Healthful Moist Heat All Winter Long

Every Glenwood furnace is equipped with a built-in water pan. As air circulates through the system it absorbs moisture from the pan and overcomes much of the excessive dryness that is always caused when cold outside air is raised to 70 degrees.

ON MURDER CHARGE

W. H. Moore, 17, Indicted At Belfast—Also Three Recaptured Prisoners

William H. Moore, 17, of Knox, alleged confessed slayer of Jeremiah G. Abbott, 51-years-old star route mail carrier between Thorndike and Freedom, was yesterday indicted on the charge of murder by the grand jury of Waldo County. The youth, who is alleged to have told Sheriff Littlefield since his arrest and alleged admission of the crime that he had hoped to become a man like the late John Dillinger, has expressed no regret for the killing of Abbott.

Alfred W. Downing of Boston, ex-pugilist, one of four prisoners who escaped from the county jail last Sunday and among the three recaptured, was indicted on charges of breaking, entering and larceny, breaking jail and larceny of an automobile. The charge of breaking, entering and larceny, on which he was being held at the time of his escape, was in connection with wholesale thefts of cigarettes, in which John Hazelton, 56, of Bangor, still at large, is suspected of being the "master mind." The charge of larceny of an automobile is the result of the stealing of a truck in which the four fugitives fled from Belfast after making their get-away from the jail.

Albert Arsenaull of Brooks, another of the quartet, was indicted on the same counts as Downing, and George McAuley of Belfast was indicted for breaking jail and larceny of a car.

Uncle Christopher Columbus didn't get his just deserts in Rockland yesterday, the only flag shown in honor of Columbus Day being that in front of the Hastings dry goods store. A well known K. C. who has a store at The Brook, was asleep at the switch, as was the flag editor of The Courier-Gazette.

An airplane bringing Herbert R. Bean, State commander of the American Legion arrives Sunday at Rockland Airport at 11:20 a. m., and will be met by members of Winslow-Holbrook Post, who are requested to be at their hall at 10:30, to march to the field, headed by the Drum Corps. MR. DAY'S FAREWELL

Former Rockland Preacher Is Made Pastor Emeritus In Winthrop, Mass.

A triumphant farewell was tendered Rev. William J. Day, pastor for 21 years of Winthrop, (Mass.) First Baptist Church, and Mrs. Day, when lavish flowers, beautiful songs, appropriate speeches and resolutions, suitable gifts and hearty good wishes for God-speed in their new home, were freely bestowed on this beloved couple by their hundreds of church members and other friends, at the 7:30 p. m. service, Sept. 30, in First Baptist Church, whose auditorium was crowded to the doors.

The large church pulpit was edged with tall baskets of chrysanthemums, large and small, artistically interspersed with ferns.

The choir of over 30 voices showed its excellent training in the three numbers so well sung, and Miss Flossie Moore, church organist, presided at the pipe organ.

Mr. Day's text was modeled after words by Paul, in Romans 16:23. "I have no more place in these parts," which immediately awakened his hearers' interest, which increased as he explained why, in four divisions, and spoke of his work being done here, as was Paul's in Macedonia.

First Baptist Church members at the farewell services to Rev. and Mrs. Day, presented the former with a beautifully inscribed and framed testimonial of appreciation, in which their beloved leader was "officially" made Pastor Emeritus for all the years of his life.

The Winthrop Sun devotes half a page to the "farewell," and every line of it emphasized the high regard which the church and the community held for them.

PASTOR PERRY GOES

Rev. L. G. Perry, pastor of the Littlefield Memorial Free Baptist Church, has accepted a call to the church in Clinton, and preaches his farewell sermon here tomorrow. Mr. Perry came here five years ago, and has labored industriously in behalf of the parish, which he leaves in a thriving condition. Mrs. Perry, who has been a valuable assistant, served recently on the school board.

IN THE CHURCHES

SERMONETTE

Sabbath Calm

To be indeed what e'er the soul
 In dreams hath thirsted for so long—
 A portion of heaven's glorious whole
 Of loveliness and song—
 So turns my soul to Thee.

As we grow older we may always keep young in spirit. It is springtime at Tennant's Harbor. Violets, tulips and daffodils in abundance; too early for daisies, buttercups or lilacs. Like two boys, Dr. Leach and I walk out through the woods to the harbor entrance. On the lawn in one of his trees, in a snug little house, Mother Bluebird peeks out while her reprobate husband watches us closely from the telephone wire. Late the afternoon before they had been singing their joyous notes. No song is just like theirs; not so musical, to my ears, as the song sparrows, but unforgettable. A day of sunshine with a tonic breeze blowing in from Southern Island. Down over the hill the church bell rings, while from off the water, repeated over and over, the plaintive sound of the new surf bell floats across to us. Through the forest the flickers scolded, but we could not see them. Out on the extreme point a yellow-legged plover was wading knee deep, his sharp staccato cry so much in contrast to the weird wails of the gulls or the lazy caws of the crows. At the end of the woods and the edge of the shore, from just beside us, came a rush of wings, and there in an old stump, not two feet away, was the drilled hole and nest of Mrs. Yellowhammer.

What a sermon these emissaries of God preach of His love and care, and over all the peace and calm of the New England Sabbath.

William A. Holman.

Rules for enjoying a grouch

Fall out of bed and be sure it's from the wrong side. Don't bother to say good morning to anyone. If it is mentioned to you reply that it's not your fault. Don't have anything to do with folks who smile. They are laughing at you, but never mind, you'll get even some day. Eat heartily of food that disagrees with you. It may give you insomnia. Then you'll be in good trim for tomorrow's grouch.

Many Uses for Bamboo

Found by the Chinese

In one sense the Chinese civilization might be said to be a civilization built on bamboo. Throughout a large part of China groves of bamboo grow like trees near the homes of the people. They eat the tender tips of bamboo as we eat asparagus, and use bamboo chopsticks to eat their food. They carry rice in bamboo baskets and sweep the floor with bamboo brooms. They learn to write on bamboo paper with bamboo pens. Houses are made with bamboo poles at the corners, woven bamboo walls and roofs. Shoes and hats are made of the same light, strong material.

Not all Chinese are rice eaters. This is a mistaken impression which gained currency because the first European ships to visit China put in at southern ports, in the rice-raising lands. Millions of Chinese, particularly those in north China and Manchuria, never see rice, but depend on the soy bean and wheat for food. But it is true that many more millions eat rice. Rice grows in very wet land, land that is generally covered with shallow water at planting time. Each tiny rice seed is grown in a seed bed until it is about 8 inches high. Then the tender shoots are transplanted in even rows in the wet fields, backbreaking work, for which the planters receive very poor pay.

Australia Has Variety of Animals and Plants

Australia has more strange plants and animals than any other country in the world. And for a very good reason. In Australia plants and animals are very much like those which existed in the rest of the world millions of years ago.

At some far distant time, Australia was connected by land with Asia, and perhaps with South America, as well. Then the bridge of land disappeared beneath the sea, leaving this island continent completely isolated. And while higher forms of flora and fauna developed in Europe, Asia and the Americas, life in Australia went its own way, changing little.

That's why we see in the tropical forests of this country such huge tree-fossils as are found only as fossils in the rest of the world. There are lilies and tulips as big as trees. And while there are no native cats, horses, cattle, sheep, lions or tigers, there are such strange creatures as the kangaroo, the duckbill and the anteater. Some of these are connecting links between the animals of today and the huge reptiles that inhabited the earth in prehistoric times.

Australia still has plenty of reptiles—100 varieties of snakes, three-fourths of which are poisonous. There are also several hundred kinds of lizards, some of which grow to be six feet long—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Deserts Are in Two Zones

Deserts, in the popular sense of the word, occur mainly in two zones encircling the world, and corresponding to regions of minimum rainfall. The more extensive extends from near the equator in an east-northeasterly direction across the whole breadth of North Africa, containing the Great Sahara, Libyan and Arabian Deserts; over the peninsula of Arabia, through Persia, Turkestan, the Gobi or Shamo desert, in about 52 degrees north latitude, to the Pacific ocean. The ring is completed by the Great Basin of North America, in 40 degrees north latitude. The southern zone, less complete, comprises the Kalahari desert, in southwest Africa; the interior of Australia, and small districts in the Argentine Republic and in the Andes.

The Appalachian Trail

The Appalachian Trail, as conceived by its proponents, is a footpath for hikers in the Appalachian mountains between Maine to Florida, a distance of some 2,500 miles. The trail shuns automobile roads and lowlands, the purpose being to provide access to the mountains and wild country of the Eastern highlands for tramp, camping and outdoor recreation. The route is the crestline of the Appalachian system. With the exception of national and state parks and national forests traversed, the trail is on privately owned land with the consent of owners.

Vicious Fish Menace

One of the most dangerous of the wild creatures of South America is a fish. Strange to say the vicious piranhas, as they are called, are not ferocious looking and usually are only 18 inches long. However, they are the terror of river crossings. They are voracious meat eaters and yearly kill hundreds of cattle and horses. Since the fish travel in schools they also have been known to attack and to kill men, stripping the flesh from the body in a few moments.

Longest Life Span

The longest recorded life span of any backboned animal is 152 years and is credited to a giant land tortoise known to have lived on the island of Mauritius from 1700 to 1918. As it was not young when the record started, its true age may have been more than 200 years. The largest land turtles and crocodiles probably live beyond 100 years, states an authority at the Field Museum, Chicago, but records are few. The greatest recorded age for any crocodile is that of a Chinese alligator which has lived since 1885 in the Frankfurt zoological gardens.

TRIBUTE TO NEW PRESIDENT

Mrs. Emma Torrey, Who Heads National W. R. C. In Maine, Guest Of Patriotic Bodies

Town hall was well filled Tuesday evening with officers and members of the G.A.R., allied bodies and friends who gathered to pay tribute to Mrs. Emma L. Torrey, newly elected State Department President of the National W.R.C., at the reception tendered her by Fred A. Norwood Corps of which she is a past president.

The hall had been elaborately decorated for the occasion, with a stage setting of flags, pillars, bask-

Mrs. Holmes efficiently presiding the program continued with the flag salute given in unison followed by invocation by Rev. F. F. Fowle. Arthur K. Walker, first selectman and L. True Spear, a member of the school board, brought greeting in behalf of the town, to which Mrs. Torrey gracefully responded. She also, in her address, expressed her appreciation to the Department for her appointment to so high a station and thanked her townspeople, her Corps and all who had co-operated with her.

At 8 o'clock the Camden-Rockport Band, Clarence Fish, leader, opened the program with the strains of a march, and the distinguished guests, led by Mildred Holmes, president of Fred A. Norwood, W.R.C., and color bearers, Mary Snow, Addie Wentworth, Inez Grant and Carrie Gray, entered the hall, proceeded down the center aisle and took places in front of the stage, where an informal reception was held.

during many years of patriotic work. She urged that patriotism be instilled into the hearts of the younger generations that when the ranks of the G.A.R. are entirely dissolved the good work may still go on. With this object in view she presented to Rev. F. F. Fowle and Rev. G. P. Currier large silk flags to be displayed in the Methodist and Baptist Churches. Both pastors responded and also extended greetings in behalf of their church.

Mrs. Holmes then spoke for her Corps expressing their love to Mrs. Torrey and full appreciation for the service she has rendered, having served for five years as its president. Greetings were also extended by representatives of all the patriotic bodies: Mr. Huntley for the G.A.R., to which Mrs. French responded; Mrs. Plummer for the Daughters of Union Veterans; Mrs. Salter for State Corps; Mrs. Cross for Auxiliary. Mrs. Ellen Bohndell of the Fred A. Norwood Corps, who with Mrs. Hazel Cain and Mrs. Maude Peterson, served as department aids for the evening, gave a general response to all these greetings.

Interpreting the program was a selection by the combined choirs of the two churches; reading, "The Ride of Jenny McNeil," Esther Simmons, with piano accompaniment; piano solo, Mrs. May Dearborn of Augusta; song, Donald Welt; trumpet solo, Robert Cain; tap dance, Barbara Richardson in a red, white and blue costume; saxophone solo, Gertrude Haverer; trumpet solo, Leroy Moon, and selections by the Band. The affair was brought to a close with the color bearers furling the flags to the strains of the Star Spangled Banner, played by the Band and benediction by Rev. G. P. Currier.

Mrs. Torrey was presented with many beautiful gifts.

A GOLDEN SURPRISE

Former St. George Pastor and His Wife Given Dinner Party In Wilmington

At the fine home of Mr. and Mrs. Burr F. Jones in Watertown, Mass., a delightful 50th anniversary dinner party was recently given in honor of Mr. Jones' parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. Frank Jones, now of Wilmington, Mass.

It was planned as a surprise, and nothing in the invitation existed to excite suspicion since the exact date was Monday instead of the previous Saturday; but on arrival at the door the many voices joining in a grand chorus of welcome disclosed the fact that every member in the family party of three generations was present, and the secret was out.

Golden decorations were much in evidence and none but the son Gordon of the home could possibly have placed them in such lofty positions. When the dining room doors were swung open and the genial hostess gave the call to dinner another vision of sunshine loveliness, gold and green intermingling so tastefully, greeted them.

And the dinner, with its many courses so appetizingly cooked, was a marvel of excellence. It was found on inquiry that the whole delicious menu was planned, and (mothers take notice) cookery done by the daughter Miss Lucile Jones, who was graciously serving.

At the close of the dinner a "mystery" pie was brought in for final desert which had "many strings to it" and for all it held surprises, but the two special strings for "Father and Mother, Grandma and Grandpa" revealed the hearts of the two loyal sons and families in a way which stirred feelings of tenderness and thankfulness for "such as they."

Rev. Mr. Jones served as pastor of the First Baptist Church of St. George 4 1/2 years, and it is the wish of himself and wife to extend to the many who have sent their good wishes on this occasion, their heartfelt thanks.

THE REALM OF MUSIC

Gladys St. Clair Morgan

Quite a bit of comment has been made since a short article recently appeared in another department of this paper pertaining to the outgrowth of music in the schools, particularly with regard to chorus activities and church choirs. While some of this comment has been warmly expressed in favor of school music some has not been so happy, and it seems an opportune time to enlarge on what music is doing for our boys and girls, to point out that in several of our churches junior choirs are already organized and have been functioning for some time, and to assert that the greater number of boys and girls in school, of junior and senior high age, are able to lift up their voices in "chorused ranks" joyfully and capably.

Rockland has managed to keep music in the schools through a period of severe economic depression when many towns and cities have thrown it into the discard along with the other so-called "frills". Here an honest effort was made to retain this activity, it being the unanimous opinion that it would work detriment to eliminate what is considered the greatest cultural art, especially so when other courses held as non-essentials had to be discontinued. In some Maine cities and towns this effort has not been put forth. There is Bath, for example. There all the so-called "frills" were thrown out in one sweep, art, manual training, domestic science, physical education, and music. Last week at the State Congress of Parents and Teachers in Augusta I had luncheon with a group of Bath women, and the talk turned to schools. These women were highly indignant that Bath had made its schools such a butt in the city cuts, and one said: "If they had only left music it would not seem quite so bad. Why do we stand for it? We should rise in a body, we parents, and demand that our schools be given a square deal." The political side was touched upon, but that is another story.

The taxpayers would be less prone to criticize regarding music in the school or any other features of the system were they themselves in closer touch with the schools, if they familiarized themselves with the workings of the school. In the past 10 years I have come to see things quite differently. All my life I have loved children and youth, but since I have come to sit in school committees, to work in the Parent-Teacher Association, to visit schools and have children in the schools, to know the teachers, my outlook has become vastly changed. I have great admiration for our superintendent and teachers. No group of men or women can possibly give more loyal, more conscientious, more unselfish devoted work than they. We think we are worked to death in the care of two to four children day in and day out, yet some of our teachers, have anywhere from 30 to 200 or more children passing under their care five days of each week, eight or more hours a day, not only to be disciplined, but to be taught, because a teacher has to have an educational background which many parents do not and never will have.

If those taxpayers who feel that music in the schools is a waste of money will visit some of the music periods, and hear the chorus work, the glee clubs, the rhythm bands, the school band, the orchestras, or even the routine drill work in the lower grades, I am confident they will go away feeling that those youngsters are getting something vastly worth while, something that can put to shame many of us who have had some later study in music, something to prepare them for wise use of leisure time a problem which is a matter of concern for the nation at present.

If any doubt that young people today cannot lift their voices in chorus, they should have been in Belfast, last May when the Eastern Maine School Music Festival was in session, and heard the 500 singers under the direction of Mr. Wescott of the Bar Harbor schools. These boys and girls, of High School age, were brought together for one brief rehearsal before the evening performance. Familiar selections were chosen, yet among them were one or two heavy numbers, but those children sang them like veterans, and the way they responded to suggestions, the slightest movement of a hand to bring about modulations and attacks, well, it was a revelation. Last year over the radio I heard a High School chorus (some Massachusetts school) sing such numbers as "The Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's Messiah and "The Heavens Ape Telling" from "The Creation" choruses with antiphonal effects, choruses with voice obligato, and so on, marvelous work, difficult to believe it was done by a High School group, not picked voices, but a massed school chorus.

Everywhere music supervisors are reporting a greater interest in music than ever before. Mrs. Esther Rogers, our own supervisor, says this, and last week in talking with Adelbert Wells Sprague in Bangor he told me there was definite increased musical interest at University of Maine in all branches of the art. Mr. Sprague uses large groups of singers from both the University and the Bangor high schools in his Eastern Maine Festival chorus each year. Wellington Smith when forming the chorus for his Thomaston concert this summer was particularly anxious to get singers of high school age.

Several of our local churches have junior choirs. To be sure they function only during the winter season, and because of that our people here for the summer only lose sight of this splendid work being done in our churches. At the First Baptist church there is a junior choir of 24 voices and a young people's chorus of 20 or more singers. The Congregational and Universalist churches have vested junior choirs. The Methodist Church brings in many of its young people for a Sunday evening chorus, and the Episcopal Church has had a junior choir for some period. I think the Littlefield Memorial Church has a junior group. While these groups are comparatively small, they would make quite a formidable massed showing.

I cannot say too much in commendation of Mrs. Rogers' work as supervisor. Her teaching right through the system, from sub-primary to high school, is done with intelligence, with understanding and vision. She teaches the children not because she is music supervisor, but because she loves the work, and to her each child is an individual in whose heart she is trying to instill the love of music. Her rhythm bands in the lower grades are a joy. She teaches the children to read music, to sing simple songs well, and of course as her work progresses through the grades it takes on more character. In the High School she has chorus work and a girls' glee club, and plans to organize a boys' glee club. In addition to all this she keeps in touch with all other music activities, the band, the orchestra and departmental work in the junior high.

Her glee club work was exceptionally well done, yet I did not realize how outstanding it was until I heard her girls' glee clubs (Rockland and Camden) at Belfast last May. Appearing in a large group from the eastern part of Maine, Bangor among them, her clubs simply stood out by their finished work. No others had such fine diction, such clean attack, such beautiful tone quality, such sensitive shading. I remember one of the judges who sat in front of me. When the Rockland group began to sing, she straightened up and was all attention. When the singing ceased, she turned to me, an utter stranger, and said: "Who is that director, where did she train, how long has she been in this work? She knows her business." This judge I learned later had been in New York school music for many years. Mrs. Rogers, is equipped through her training to give young singers the fundamentals of right singing. She understands voice placement, correct tone production and the right method of breathing along with other points which answer until the boy or girl reaches the age for more advanced vocal study, usually not before the 16th year as is generally agreed by competent voice instructors.

In the election of Harold Libby as High School orchestra leader a decided step ahead has been taken. Mr. Libby carrying on this activity in connection with his duties as principal of Junior High is saving the city quite a tidy sum, but that is not all the advantage, for he brings to the work valuable experience gained in such undertakings at Boothbay where he previously taught school and in directing orchestral work at the Castine Summer Music School for the past few seasons. In training groups in sectional work, it is indicated that we will have a High School orchestra to which we can point with pride. He is equipped to teach several instruments himself, and in these sectional groups can both teach and train youngsters. His pleasing manner, his obvious musical ability, and his knack of meeting young people on their own ground, point to success.

H. E. Kirkpatrick's work with the School Band for the past few years speaks for itself. His little group at Belfast came in for warm praise and high rankings by the judges, despite the fact that he had some young players and some who had had very few lessons. His direction is keenly understanding; he knows how to get cooperation and results, and if only some way could be found to bring about balanced instrumentation, his work with the band would be even more outstanding. Instruments cost money, a lot of money, and there simply is no money for instruments, either out of the individual's pocket or the city's or any public spirited organization's. So under existing conditions Mr. Kirkpatrick carries on the best he can and his results are most gratifying. His spirit with the band has been commendable for he has carried on the work whether any pay was in sight or not, and through the summer he kept the group together playing on several public occasions without recompense.

In Junior High Miss Elizabeth Hagar's work has been outstanding a girls' glee club, a boys' glee club and an orchestra in addition to regular chorus training. Her work in chorus and glee clubs has been particularly noteworthy, as the children in Junior High are at the adolescent stage when their voices are neither one thing nor the other. In Junior High, too, the Walter Damrosch music appreciation course is carried on. Miss Mary Bird succeeding Miss Hagar is taking up this work with skill and understanding, with a splendid background afforded by special training at Gorham Normal, Columbia University, and summer courses at both Lasell and Columbia.

So, do not condemn what is being done in school music. Let us rather try to discover what weakness develops after the boys and girls are out of school for a few years, for that is when the slump seems to come. While the influence of school remains, they are active, but as a general mass it does not last, probably because there is no way to keep mass interest as in school. There music reaches every child, whether rich or poor, and gives to that child a glimpse of beauty which may remain with him always even though no opportunity may be provided for further use. In school all children are brought together in music; out of school it reaches only a small number. Whether there is lack of incentive, no direct effort put forth by older musicians, clubs or church people, to keep the young folks musically inclined, I do not know. There must be something for we all know that in a few years after school days are done and laid by, there is a noticeable let-down in music among the same young people who shortly before had raised their voices in "chorused ranks."

My final admonition to the taxpayer, or anyone else who may be unfavorably inclined toward music in the schools, is to attend High School some morning when an assembly, chorus singing or the music period, is in progress, and I'll wager there will be a conversion.

To avoid trouble and insure safety, breathe through your nose. It keeps the mouth shut.

His spirit with the band has been commendable for he has carried on the work whether any pay was in sight or not, and through the summer he kept the group together playing on several public occasions without recompense.

In Junior High Miss Elizabeth Hagar's work has been outstanding a girls' glee club, a boys' glee club and an orchestra in addition to regular chorus training. Her work in chorus and glee clubs has been particularly noteworthy, as the children in Junior High are at the adolescent stage when their voices are neither one thing nor the other. In Junior High, too, the Walter Damrosch music appreciation course is carried on. Miss Mary Bird succeeding Miss Hagar is taking up this work with skill and understanding, with a splendid background afforded by special training at Gorham Normal, Columbia University, and summer courses at both Lasell and Columbia.

So, do not condemn what is being done in school music. Let us rather try to discover what weakness develops after the boys and girls are out of school for a few years, for that is when the slump seems to come. While the influence of school remains, they are active, but as a general mass it does not last, probably because there is no way to keep mass interest as in school. There music reaches every child, whether rich or poor, and gives to that child a glimpse of beauty which may remain with him always even though no opportunity may be provided for further use. In school all children are brought together in music; out of school it reaches only a small number. Whether there is lack of incentive, no direct effort put forth by older musicians, clubs or church people, to keep the young folks musically inclined, I do not know. There must be something for we all know that in a few years after school days are done and laid by, there is a noticeable let-down in music among the same young people who shortly before had raised their voices in "chorused ranks."

My final admonition to the taxpayer, or anyone else who may be unfavorably inclined toward music in the schools, is to attend High School some morning when an assembly, chorus singing or the music period, is in progress, and I'll wager there will be a conversion.

To avoid trouble and insure safety, breathe through your nose. It keeps the mouth shut.

PREVENTION WEEK

NINE RULES OF FIRE PREVENTION

Make sure that your match is out before throwing it away.

Extinguish the last spark of your cigar or cigarette before throwing it away.

Take care lest dry waste or oily rags accumulate in some out-of-the-way corner of your house.

Build your rubbish bonfire where there is no danger of spreading and watch it until it is out.

Have your electric wiring inspected regularly and repaired when necessary.

Avoid using kerosene, benzene or naphtha for cleaning purposes.

Keep your heating system and chimney in perfect working condition.

Do not leave your forest camp fire before it is totally extinguished.

Keep matches beyond the reach of your children and your children out of reach of fire.

CLEAN Premises Seldom Burn — So Take These Precautions TODAY

1. Remove All Ashes, Waste Paper and Other Unnecessary Accumulation of Combustible Material From Basements, Beneath Stairways and Other Out-Of-The-Way Places.
2. Clean Chimneys and Flues (Repaint Where Necessary), Remove Birds' Nests and Other Accumulations From Chimney Breathers and Cornices.
3. An Approved Fire Extinguisher Should Be Hung in An Easily Accessible Place.
4. Thoroughly Clean Out Your Garage and See That No Oily Rags, Waste or Clothing, Old Radiator Covers, Old Tires, Etc., Are Left in Corners. Clean the Floor of Oil and Grease and Remove All Grease Deposits From Walls and Supports. Provide a Fire Extinguisher. Water Thrown On Burning Gasoline or Oil Merely Serves To Spread the Fire.

Neglect of fire hazards is serious—help to preserve life and property from needless destruction by keeping the principles of fire prevention always in mind.

NEVER take a CHANCE with FIRE!

Remove the Hazards of Loss By FIRE!

Fire Prevention Week again emphasizes the necessity of reducing fire hazards. First, by exercising every care to prevent fires in forests, homes and business districts. Second, by depositing valuables in safety deposit boxes renting from $3 a year. They insure absolute protection against fire loss.
